DYSPEPSIA.

IS that misery experienced when we suddenly become aware that we possess a diabolical arrangement called a stomach. The stomach is the reservoir from which every fibre and tissue must be nourished, and any trouble with it is soon felt throughout the whole system. Among a dozen dyspeptics no two will have the same predominant symptoms. Dyspeptics of active mental power and a bilious temperament are subject to Sick Headaches; those of fleshy and phlegmatic habit have Dead Spells, while the thin and nervous are abandoned to gloomy forebodings. Some dyspeptics are wonderfully forgetful; others have great irritability of temper.
Whatever form Dyspepsia may take, one thing is certain,
The underlying cause is in the LIVER, and one thing more is equally certain, no one will remain a dyspeptic who will

PIANOS.

GAINED FIRST PREMIUM FOR GREATEST merit at the New Orleans Cotton Centennial and WORLD'S Exposition for refined and wonderful power of tone, elegance of design, and superb finish. Only piano endorsed by United States commissioners, from each of the States. Cases finest carved, rosewood finish—finest imported double repeating action—three strings throughout of best patent steel wire—keys best ivory. Our new patent steel tuning device, instead of wood, is the greatest invention ever made in pianos. It consists of stationary STEEL tuning pins that are set in a mold and molten STEEL is run round the pins keeping them solidly in place. A thimble or shell pin is made to exactly fit the stationary pin revolving therein; thus the strings wind round the pins. After the strings are properly stretched the piano can never get out of tune, the rest plank being of STEEL not affected by extremes of climate. This will be appreciated by all musicians in city or country. It will stand twenty years without tuning and is good for 100. No other piano has this improvement.
Great strength and durability is another advantage. In other pianos holes are bored in wooden boards and tuning pins inserted. The pins turn round in this board and cannot stand permanently in tune, and it often cracks, splits, dries out, becoming utterly, totally and entirely worthless as a musical instrument. Our STEEL tuning device is in no way affected by such casualities, and the sounding board is so constructed that our pianos can never become thin or metallic in tone. They are always in tune and the expense of tunning is saved. This patent alone is worth millions and makes our piano the greatest in the world. Prices are no higher than other pianos. Buying direct from us, the largest manufacturers, you save $100 or $200—dealers' profits. Don't mind the ominous growlings of dealers and agents, who see their chances of selling a poor piano at a big profit of $200—slipping away—pity them.
We guarantee our pianos ten years. 200 styles. We have put our prices at lowest bed-rock for Cash.

A $600 Piano for $259.50; a $900 Piano for $297 50; a $1200 Piano for $375.50; a $1500 Piano for $475.50.

Upright Cabinet Grands, with stool and rubber cover shipped on board cars at S. F., to any part of the United States, Canada or Mexico. Our terms are cash with order. If not as represented money returned. We occasionally have good second-hand pianos, made over at $100 to $300, which we take in part payment for our own. Write or call for catalogue, free.

SYCAMORES IN BLOOM.

Like flame wing'd harps the seed blooms lie
Amid the shadowy sycamores.
The music of each leaflet's sigh
Thrills them continually,
The small harps of the sycamores.

Small birds innumerable find rest
And shelter 'midst the sycamores.
Their songs (of love in a warm soft nest)
Are faintly echoed east and west
By the red harps of the sycamores.

The dewfall and the starshine make
Amidst the shadowy sycamores
Sweet delicate strains; the gold beams shake
The leaves at morn, and swift awake
The small harps of the sycamores.

O sweet earth's music everywhere,
Though faint as in the sycamores;
Sweet when buds burst, birds pair;
Sweet when as thus there wave in the air
The red harps of the sycamores.
—William Sharp in Harper's.

CUPID AND THE CENSUS.

They were sitting on the stairs in the half light, and as the stairway was narrow they were necessarily rather close together.
They were between the first landing and the hallway, and the glimmering light below left them so completely in the shadow that even if any one emerged from the parlor they were hidden from observation. It was from the upstairs region that they apprehended danger, as the frequent fearful glances of the girl in that direction betrayed. As there was no room for him to dispose of his left arm comfortably he had put it around her waist. Lovers are great economizers of space—and they were lovers.
"Madge, darling," he said, "I shall have to leave this house. I cannot bear the irony and contempt which your mother heaps upon me every day at table."
"What if mother should descend and catch us here?" said the girl, irrelevantly, letting her head sink, with a sigh, on his shoulder, an act which bespoke anything but a desire to escape from her compromising situation until necessity compelled her to do so. His lips met hers, but his thoughts seemed to be running in a sternly practical rather than a sentimental channel, for he continued, "and I have not paid my board for six weeks. It's too bad."
"Then you certainly can't leave, George," she murmured. "Ma would never let your things go out of the house until you had paid her, and how are you going to pay her until you get some work? Besides, what would become of me? I should marry that ogre on the second floor front; I know I should, I couldn't resist ma's importunities without your ever present love to sustain me."
A pause ensued which George devoted to sustaining her in the orthodox lover like way, a proceeding which she submitted to with a demurrer which was not altogether a demurrer.
"I feel awfully blue, dearest," he said. "I did not get a single reply to all those answers I sent to the advertisements in yesterday's papers. I don't know what I'll do."
"Oh, don't get downhearted, George. Something will surely turn up. Perhaps Smalley & Smart will take you back into their office."
"They will never do that. It is very hard to be suspected of dishonesty when one is really innocent. They let me resign, you know; but they are convinced that I have robbed them, and"—passionately—"I sometimes think that even you must distrust me."
"I shall never do that, George," she replied, with a little squeeze of his hand, "and directly you get another situation I will be yours, even if Mr. Philip Van Schaick is a bank president and a millionaire, as ma says he is. It is lucky ma does not suspect why you left Smalley & Smart's. She is so suspicious and unbelieving."
"I believe that old villain is a fraud, a delusion and a snare. Why doesn't he show himself in his true colors and say what he has instead of insinuating himself into your mother's affections and letting us all surmise this, that and the other?"
"Perhaps he is nearly as poor as you are, dear."
"Then he must be very poor indeed," he said with a little laugh.
"Ah, yes, but I love you."
"Then I am rich indeed. But, Madge, I have an idea—I'll explode the mystery. I'll—what was that?"
There was a noise in the hall. The front door closed with a bang and a heavy step began ascending the stairs. It was Mr. Philip Van Schaick returning from his office down town. Madge picked up her skirts and flew, but not quick enough to prevent the old gentleman from catching a glimpse of her white flounces as she turned the bend in the stairway.
When Mr. Van Schaick reached the landing he looked keenly into the young man's face and said simply, "I thought so." A moment later his door was heard to close on the second floor and Madge returned with a very white face.
"Oh," she said, "I am going down to the kitchen. Ma will begin to wonder where I am. We are lost."
"No," he replied, drawing her to him, "I believe I have an idea which counter to his hobby of mysticism—the contains the possibilities of our redemption. I'll join the census."
"I would not hear of it. Fifty cents a day away out in Texas, and then when you left the army you'd be unfit for anything. We couldn't possibly live on fifty cents a day, though I would endure anything for your sake. I—. All right, ma, I'm coming. There she is. How I wish I was an orphan. Coming."
"What a dear girl she is," said George Darrell to himself as he went slowly to his little room near the roof. And then as her antithesis suggested itself to him he added vehemently: "But what a tyrant her mother is! If Madge was only alone in the world I wo"—His hand dropped into his empty pocket and he stopped short.
Mrs. McMurray, Madge's mother, was a strong minded Scotch lady and the derelict of an officer in the British army, who had imbued her with distinctly aristocratic aspirations and left her to fight the battle of life with an only daughter, for whom she had ambitious ideas and an appalling number of debts. Mrs. McMurray had disposed of her debts in the perfunctory manner usual with the aristocracy, and her sole care was now to dispose of her daughter with equal advantage. She therefore strongly disapproved of that young lady's avowed attachment to her penniless boarder, George Darrell, and only her Scotch notions of economy prevented her from incontinently turning that love sick youth into the pitiless world. The fact that George Darrell owed her for several weeks' board was at once his salvation and his curse.
Capt. McMurray, after having finished his term of service in India and being placed upon the half pay list, had settled in New York with some indefinite idea of making a fortune out of a scheme of which nobody ever fully comprehended the details. It was during one of the financial crises which always loomed on the horizon of the McMurray family that Mrs. McMurray determined to take in boarders. Since then she had always had her house full of strangers.
Mrs. McMurray had but one weakness; she insisted upon the desirability of her house from a fashionable point of view, and it was consequently peculiarly aggravating to her refined sensibilities to have a young man about like George Darrell, whose appearance was a reproach to her establishment.
Mr. Philip Van Schaick had only consented to rent the second floor front upon repeated assurances that the house was eminently fashionable. He was the star boarder of No. 103 West Forty-fourth street. He was a man who loved mystery as much as a Balzac, and it may be remarked, parenthetically, that this was the only particular in which he resembled the great French author. He had resided with Mrs. McMurray about five years, and during the whole of that period he had been an enigma to that worthy lady and the rest of her household. He delighted to pique the curiosity of all who came in contact with him as to his antecedents and the source of his income. He was a mild mannered little man of uncertain age, and he wore the loudest kind of checks in the market. Mrs. McMurray, in her communicative moments, had assured her daughter and the Irish maid of all work that Mr. Van Schaick was either a bank president or a railroad king. She was a woman who was easily impressed by external attributes, and she argued that a man who wore such very large checks must necessarily have a balance at the bank.
Of late Mr. Van Schaick had been very attentive to Madge, and he had become more mysterious than ever. He always returned home in the evening with a charming boutonniere in his coat which he gave to Madge with as much ceremony as if he were the spokesman of a political deputation. Mrs. McMurray showed herself distinctly favorable to his suit, if his vague attentions could be so construed. His gray hair, in her opinion, did not render him in any way ineligible for her daughter's hand. She fondly surmised that this sign of decadence was due to the cares of state or the responsibilities of a large fortune.
Mr. Van Schaick, whatever his intentions were, very cordially disliked Madge's youthful and avowed suitor. He lost no opportunity of impressing upon that young man that those unsuccessful in life had only themselves to thank for it. Then he would deplore George's unfortunate financial condition and remark that when he was his age he had already enjoyed the respect and esteem of the community.
This of course all had a personal application to George, and Mrs. McMurray would look benignantly at the coffee urn and say she "did not know what was coming to the young men nowadays, they were so flighty." And as for the girls—she would look at Madge and sigh until that young lady was overwhelmed with blushes and confusion.
George had not been able to impart to Madge the details of his little plot, or disabuse her mind of the idea that the census was in some way connected with the United States army, and for two days he tried to make an appointment with his eyes across the table, but she assiduously avoided his glance. Ma had evidently been expressing her dissatisfaction at the intimacy between the young people, and Madge had on one of her peculiarly erratic fits of complete filial obedience.
On the third morning at breakfast Mr. Van Schaick seemed more than usually absorbed in his morning paper, and though every one in the house knew his aversion to the peculiar journalism of the age—it was obnoxious to his secretive nature, and ran directly proclivities pointed look on his face could not escape observation.
"Some more insignificant personal affairs in the paper?" inquired Mrs. McMurray. "How trivial and objectionable the New York papers are! They altogether lack the dignity of the London Times."
"Thank heaven," murmured George from his end of the table. "A diet of the Times is provocative of insanity."
"That remark, Ma Darrell, is only indicative of your deplorably bad bringing up. You are hopelessly vulgar."
"Madam," said Mr. Van Schaick, solemnly, "the American newspaper is a disgrace to our civilization. All the best people despise it—I hate it. I subscribe simply to see to what depths of vulgarity and iniquity it is possible for men to descend in print. And now the government of the United States is about to aid this immoral, impertinent institution by adopting its methods in the census enumeration which begins today. Read those questions."
Mrs. McMurray took the paper and read the schedule of questions to be put by Uncle Sam's interviewers in the taking of the census.
"Most impudent!" said Mrs. McMurray, inwardly aglow, when she discovered that all boarders in a house were to be regarded as members of the tenant's family, and included in the same schedule. At last the reticent Philip Van Schaick would unbosom himself as to his occupation and means, and not only that, but any chronic disease, such as rheumatism or gout, would be acknowledged, and Madge would know the worst. Mrs. McMurray's head was so full when she had read the article through that her eyes filled with tears as she looked at Madge, and breathed a silent prayer that her prospective husband was not a victim of gout. After all, her maternal instincts were very strong, and though gout was a most aristocratic complaint, and was the proper disease for a man of wealth, as the annals of all the illustrious families could show, it was an annoying thing to have to nurse a gouty man. A gouty man is so unreasonable.
George Darrell left the table after making a hasty meal, and he was absent at dinner. This was unusual, as he was generally punctual at his meals. It was the only thing about which he showed any marked regularity. Mrs. McMurray noticed his absence, and significantly inquired of Madge where he was.
"How do I know?" replied that young lady innocently. "I suppose he is searching for work. There is a letter from Smalley & Smart on his plate, and I wish he would come in. I would give worlds to"—— "Madge, Mr. Darrell's letters have nothing to do with you. He is up to no good, I'll be bound, when he neglects his dinner."
Madge blushed furiously, but a violent ringing of the front bell and the sudden appearance of the maid of all work prevented her from attempting any vindication of her implied interest in the sky boarder.
"A young man wants to see you, mar'm, about the cinsus."
Mr. Philip Van Schaick's cheeks blanched at the announcement, and he almost choked himself in an attempt to appease nature and remain calm.
In a few minutes Mrs. McMurray, Madge and the boarders went upstairs to the parlor, where they found a seedy looking, clean shaven young man, with green spectacles, and big portfolio under his arm. He explained his mission, and every one crowded around him as he went through the list of questions.
There seemed to be the suggestion of a smile about the lips of the enumerator as he put the question, "Any acute or chronic disease in your family, madam?"
"No, sir," replied Mrs. McMurray, eying him indignantly.
"Only one, Mr. Enumerator," said Madge in a whisper, as she leaned over the back of his chair, "poverty."
"What did you say, my dearest child?" queried her mother in her "great occasion" tone of voice.
"I said that poverty was the only complaint in the house, ma dear," replied Madge with mock humility.
"Oh, I do not care about that," began the enumerator. Then catching madam's stern eyes fixed upon him he continued: "The government does not consider that a matter of vital importance. It is not necessarily hereditary, you know. And now, sir," addressing Mr. Van Schaick, "what is your name?"
"Philip Van Schaick," in a voice that trembled with a suggestion of tears.
"Are you white, black, mulatto, quadroon, octoroon, Chinese, Japanese or Indian?"
"Sir, you are an impudent"——
"Pardon me. I am simply following my instructions in asking you this question. I must have a categorical answer."
"I am an American born citizen of the United States. The Van Schaicks have lived in Hudson county for generations"——
"Sex—male. Yes—age at nearest birthday, please?"
"Am I bound to answer that?"
"Certainly. The United States government will compare your answer with the register of the parish church in"——
"No impertinence, young man. I am 63."
"Sure about that?"
"Quite."
"Wicked old perjurer," whispered Madge to one of the younger boarders.
"Are you single, married, widowed or divorced?"
"Widowed," with a hesitant sigh.
"What is your occupation?"
Mrs. McMurray breathed hard, and all the boarders looked at each other almost with suspended animation.
"I am a lawyer's clerk," came the reply in low, thick tones, and Mrs. McMurray fainted away. Madge seemed stunned for a moment, and then she ran joyfully out of the room. The great Van Schaick was not a man of wealth after all, and she was free to marry the poor devil of her choice. Ma would certainly see the wisdom in

A PROFITABLE INDUSTRY.

Sonoma Valley Peculiarly Adapted to the Cultivation of Flowers for Perfumery.

ED. INDEX-TRIBUNE:

I would like to submit to your readers an idea, which if put to practical use might prove a great benefit to this valley. There are several kinds of flowers that can be raised with little labor and much profit in Sonoma.

In those countries where soil and climate produce good wine, the flowers I will speak of are favored by nature and will acquire greater brilliancy of color and strength and delicacy of perfume than in any other section.

It is well known that Dame Nature has gifted this valley with a matchless climate and a soil that produces the best wine in California. This being so, there is no doubt that the cultivation of roses, pansies, violets and lavenders for perfumeries would prove a great source of profit to any one who would engage in the undertaking. The rose that is known by the name of Castillanne (wild rose of California,) has more fragrance in this section than in any other part of the State. This rose that is not at all cared for is without a rival for its perfume. The rose tree is strong and enduring and very prolific. The California roses can only be compared to those cultivated in Bengal, Persia and China. The only genuine extract of roses comes from those countries and commands a fabulous price.

The Castillanne rose that grows so well and without any care in Sonoma can be sold in large quantities in two ways—the leaves can be dried for pot pourri, etc., or the purfumery can be extracted from them. No matter how great the quantity raised there need be no fear of the supply being greater than the demand.

The pansy, violet and lavender I will say very little about, but will produce figures in regard to the former, that will prove more convincing that there is profit in these flowers. Pansies, in addition to their great demand for bouquets, produce immense profit in seed. Two ladies living near San Francisco on a piece of land 100x100 feet raised ten pounds of seed which they sold for $1,680. With a little more care in gathering the seed they could have made $2,240. Violets and lavenders are also in great demand and can be raised with almost equal profit for extracts.

In giving this information my only desire is to encourage the establishment of an industry in our midst that will prove a great source of wealth to Sonoma Valley, which is peculiarly adapted to the cultivation of flowers for extract purposes.

It Removes Pimples and Blotches.

I take pleasure in recommending Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) as a Blood Purifier. A few bottles cured me of a blood trouble after all other remedies had failed. It also removed pimples and blotches from my face, leaving the skin clear and smooth. While taking S. S. S. my appetite increased and my general health improved. Its effects as a tonic are unequaled.

Sores on his Hands.

I cheerfully bear testimony to the curative properties of your wonderful Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) I was troubled with sores on my hands which I could not cure, my blood was so out of order. I was advised by a friend to try S. S. S. and was surprised to find that after using one bottle I was entirely cured, and have not been troubled since. WILLIAM DOLE,

The World Enriched.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known; as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to clense the system gently in the Spring time or, in fact, at any time and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

Put on the Brakes.

If you find you are going down hill in point of health. Failing strength, impaired digestion and assimilation are the marks of decline. Check these and other indications of premature decay with the grand vitalizer and restraining tonic, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Beginning at the fountain head the stomach, the bitters remedies its inefficiency, corrects its errors, and sets it vigorously at work. The digestive organ is thus enabled to thoroughly separate from the food its nutritive principles, which the blood assimilating, is enriched. Thus is the system nourished, and being nourished strengthened, and abnormal waste of its tissues stayed. Appetite the power to rest well, a regular habit are also re-established, and the various functions move once more in their natural and healthful groove. The Bitters moreover, is a specific for and preventive of malarial complaints, rheumatism, biliousness and kidney troubles.

THE CITY TRUSTEES.

The City Trustees met in regular monthly session last Wednesday evening, a full Board being present.

After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and approved, it was moved by Trustee Weyl that the city purchase 200 additional feet of hose at a cost of 70 cents per foot. So ordered.

The following bills were then allowed: P. L. McGill, grading, $50; G. W Sparks, salary, $31 50; F. Breitenbach, salary, $25; Victor Jansen, labor, $2 75.

Ordinance No. 40, relative to altering Second-street East, was read a second time and passed to print, on motion of Trustee Weyl, by the following vote: Aye—Trustees Litzius, Bulotti, Weyl. No—Trustees Wegner, Poppe.

President Poppe informed the Board that the Sonoma Valley Bank intended to lay a patent sidewalk in front of the bank premises, and suggested that the city furnish a stone curbing in keeping with the proposed improvement.

Trustee Wegner, after the subject had been discussed at length, moved that $50 be appropriated for the stone curbing.

Trustee Weyl offered an amendment to Trustee Wegner's motion to the effect that the city appropriate an amount equal to what a wooden curb would cost. The amendment receiving a second from Trustee Bulotti, was adopted, all the members voting aye except Trustee Litzius, who expressed himself as being opposed to the scheme.

L. Orsi's application for a culvert was referred to the proper committee.

C. W. Engelbert and R. D. Moore addressed the Board. The latter requested a special permit to keep the Union Hotel bar open on occasions of public speaking, balls and entertainments, while the former drew the attention of the Board to a recent decision of Judge Pressley in regard to peddlers' licenses, which he thought would apply to Sonoma. No action however was taken on either proposition.

H. H. Grainee, who ought to have known better, made a very bad break by having the temerity to ask that the walk in front of his residence be curbed in order to permit him to construct a substantial sidewalk. As nobody but the school children, church-going people and residents in the eastern part of town pass along this walk, which is one of the worst in town during the winter months, the Board, soft-soaped the applicant, by taking the matter under advisement and hinting that he would get that curb for which he has so long yearned. If he don't get his rights before the rains set in he threatens to pool issues with the Broadway Kickers.

No further business appearing the Trustees bounced the spectators and went into executive session on the fire-bug business and a warrant for $150 was ordered drawn in favor of a certain detective as part payment for services rendered. The members then adjourned.

A fire at El Verano last Monday evening destroyed several out buildings belonging to the Improvement Company. The buildings became ignited from a grass fire which got beyond the control of an employee. The lost was slight.

Fred Fisher, the 12 year old son of Franz Fisher, killed a large rattlesnake on Broadway street, near the residence of W. P. Wilson, last Saturday afternoon. The reptile measured two and one half feet in length and the end of its tail was set off with seven rattles and a button.

A fire near Embarcadero last Sunday afternoon destroyed a large quantity of pasture on the farms of Peter Kiser, Jas. Aherns and Anton Kiser. The fire is supposed to have started from a lighted match which was carelessly thrown aside by a workman, after having lighted his pipe.

The Democratic delegates of Sonoma township, Messrs. Robt. Howe, S. Norris, J. McGinty, A. Box and G. W. Hooper, met in the Court House at this place last Tuesday and nominated John Kearney for Roadmaster. No nominations were made for Justices of the Peace. The members not desiring the earth simply nominated G. W. Sparks for Constable.

The dam which was built across Sonoma creek by the Boomers some months ago for forming an artificial lake for bathing and boating purposes, suddenly gave away last Sunday night, and with a mighty roar the pent up waters rushed madly down the creek, alarming quite a number of farmers residing on the banks of the stream.

A grass fire broke out in the vicinity of McEwen's farm, near Glen Ellen, last Tuesday afternoon, but was got under control by Mike Smyth and others before much damage resulted. For a time a serious fire was threatened, and but for the timely arrival of the fire fighters the country up that way would have been devastated, as a brisk breeze sprung up short'y after the fire had been got under control.

D. D. Davisson of this place has tendered his resignation to the Republican County Central Committee as a member of that body, giving as a reason that the interests of the party would be best subserved by giving the upper part of the valley representation on the Committee, the delegates from Sonoma township having made the mistake of selecting the two members, Messrs. Davisson and McDonnell, from Sonoma precinct. The action on the part of Mr. Davisson is deserving of the highest commendation. Unlike the other member of the Committee, he is not a Republican for what there is in it.

A telephone message received from South Los Guilicos just as we are going to press, states that John Etchart, a young Frenchman, aged 21 years, employed on a dairy at that place, accidentally shot and killed himself Thursday afternoon. He was mounted on a horse and carried in his hand a shot-gun. The saddle turned, and he was thrown from the animal. The gun slipped from his hand and striking the ground was discharged, the contents taking effect in the forehead, blowing his brains out. He was instantly killed. A coroner's jury was empanneled by Judge Zane yesterday and a verdict rendered in accordance with the above facts.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

A Stranger While Temporarily Insane Attempts to Disembowel Himself.

Last Saturday a stranger made his appearance in this place and after wandering aimlessly around the streets for several hours he accosted D. D. Davisson and asked to be taken to the Napa asylum. He stated that he was insane and was being pursued by armed men, who were seeking his life. Mr. Davisson, taking compassion on the unfortunate man, delivered him over to Officer Sparks, who placed him in the lock up. The following morning upon going to the jail to see how his charge was getting along, the officer was horrified to discover that he had by some means possessed himself of a pocket knife with which he had stabbed himself two inches below the navel, inflicting a wound which may prove quite serious. The knife penetrated to a depth of two or three inches. Dr. Davis was sent for and the wound dressed, after which the would be suicide was taken to the County Hospital at Santa Rosa. Should he recover from his self-inflicted injuries he will no doubt be committed to the Napa asylum. He claims to hail from Sebastopol, this county, where he says he has a son and daughter. He says his name is John Lobacker and that he is native of Switzerland.

Sonoma to the Front.

Never in the history of Sonoma has there been so much interest manifested in town improvements as at the present time. There is now in course of erection in this place the Sonoma Valley brick bank building, a brick Masonic Hall, two handsome two story stone buildings for business purposes, a livery stable, a fruit dryer, two private residences, and minor other improvements, which will add much to the beauty of the town. Next week A. McCartney of San Francisco will commence improving his property on Napa street, formerly occupied by the Sonoma Bank. In addition to the above many more improvements will be made early next spring. Fred. T. Duhring will erect a fine brick building on the site of the old adobe which has been used as a store these many years. McMackin's corner, on the opposite side of the street, will also be improved by the erection of a two or three-story brick building, which will be used for hotel and store purposes. These improvements are but the forerunner of others that are to come. A new era has dawned upon the old town, and we venture to predict that in the course of the next five years Sonoma will be one of the handsomest and most prosperous towns of its size in the State.

Sudden Death.

Luigi Ricci, proprietor of the Swiss Hotel at this place, died very suddenly last Saturday morning about four o'clock. The deceased, who was a very stout man, had not been feeling well for several days, but nothing serious was apprehended by his family, as he was able to be up and around, and on the day previous to his death attended to business as usual. After retiring to his bed on Friday night he complained of feeling quite unwell and a physician was called in who prescribed for him. Several hours after he closed his eyes as though in sleep and died without the least warning to those in attendance upon him. Heart disease is the supposed cause of death. The deceased was a native of Switzerland, aged about 45 years and leaves a wife and child. His funeral took place Sunday under the auspices of the Ancient Order of Druids of which he was a member.

Attacked by a Wild Steer.

H. Rubke of Shellville was attacked by a wild steer Wednesday last. He was knocked down by the vicious animal and rendered unconscious, and would undoubtedly have been killed but for his faithful dog, who came to his rescue and drove the animal away. Upon regaining consciousness Mr. Rubke discovered that the animal had pawed him about his head and shoulders and that one of his ears had been torn off by the hoofs of the beast. Dr. Davis was sent for and dressed the injured man's wounds which are quite painful.

Democratic Speaking.

The Democrats will fire the first gun of the campaign at Union Hall, this (Saturday) evening. Hon. T. J. Geary, Democratic nominee for Congress from this district, R. H. Beamer, candidate for member of State Board of Equalization, and Hon. Robt. Howe, nominee for State Senator, are to be the speakers. Tom Geary is a pleasing speaker and one need not necessarily be a Democrat to be entertained by him. This being the first political meeting that has been held in this place it is expected that the hall will be crowded.

The infant child of Abramho Conchi, residing on his ranch near Rhine Farm, is recovering from an attack of diphtheria.

If you want first-class accommodations go to the Union Hotel. *

A Sad Death.

It is our sad duty to record the death of Rosie Johnson, one of the fairest young maidens of the valley. After a depressing illness of many months she fell asleep peacefully last Tuesday morning at 2 o'clock at Buena Vista the, home she loved so well.

A few weeks ago her mother told her that if she could bear the journey she would take her to Florence or to Egypt. She replied, "No, I never wish to leave Sonoma Valley. It is lovelier to me than the valley of the Nile with all its ruins." She was planning to give entertainments for the young people and garden parties for the church when she became strong enough.

Rosalind had a gay and bright nature. She was of Irish parentage and had much of the wit and repartee that distinguishes that nation. She was quick and generous, one of the last requests to her mother being to permit her to give ten thousand dollars toward founding a hospital for the poor. But all her energies were repressed by a valvular disease of the heart from which she had suffered more or less during the last ten years. Had she lived her health must always have been delicate, and now she is gathered a fair young flower to bloom in the Garden of God. Like a young soldier marching into an unknown land she received from the church the provisions for the journey and entered fearlessly the realms of death.

Hymeneal.

Last Saturday Miss Catherine Josephine Boyle and James Alexander Duncan of San Francisco were married at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Julius Wegner, at Glen Ellen. The house throughout was beautifully and artistically decorated. The marriage ceremony was performed under a bell of magnificent flowers by the Rev. Father Sullivan of Sonoma. The bride was attired in a beautiful white gown with white veil and wreath, while the groom wore the conventional dress suit. The gay festivities lasted till late in the evening. Sunday morning the bride and groom departed amid a shower of rice and old shoes. Following are the names of those present: Rev. Father J. J. Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan, Wm. Hart, Miss Mary Boyle, Geo. F. Hooper, Sonoma; Mr. Landers, Joseph Mansfield, Edward Terrel, Miss Annie Smyth, Mr. and Mrs. Burns and son, Mr. Lillas, San Francisco; Francis Boyle, Miss Grace Johnson, E. E. Ouleway and Ben R. Thierkoff.

The happy couple were the recipients of many handsome and costly presents of which the following is a partial list: Handsome watch and chain, J. Wegner; set of silver, J. Mansfield; set of china, Mary Boyle; set of cut glass, P. Lillas; lamp, Francis Boyle; gold bracelets, Mrs. Wegner; table linen, Mr. Landers; two sets of furniture, Mrs. Wegner; one set of silver tea spoons, Mrs. Byrne; set carvers, Edward Wegner; water pitcher, F. Boyle; one album, Mrs. Byrne; crepe shawl, Miss Boyle.

YOUNG AMERICA.

Glen Ellen, Sept. 2, 1890.

Death of Rosalind Johnson.

The old adage "whom the gods love die young" is once more verified in the demise of Rosalind Evangelista Johnson, adopted daughter of Mrs. R. C. Johnson of Buena Vista park. The melancholy event, which occurred last Tuesday morning, can hardly be said to have taken the people of Sonoma Valley by surprise, the frailty of Miss Johnson's constitution, at all times, being well known. Much sympathy is expressed for the foster mother who had nurtured and nursed deceased with such wealth of tenderness. In early childhood, Rosy, as she was familiarly called, became the victim of acute inflammatory rheumatism. This was followed by serious lesions of the heart and other organs. Though thus severely handicapped, in a physical sense, upon life's threshold, the maiden so fair to look upon made considerable progress intellectually, and gave promise of becoming a first-rate scholar. She also developed the highest moral and spiritual qualties. The interment took place privately at noon on Thursday. The mortal remains of the young lady, draped in the habit of the Children of Mary, one of two religious orders to which she belonged, were deposited in a handsome white casket and lay in the large hall of the mansion, and was viewed by some fifty relatives and friends. Father Sullivan, who on Monday administered the sacrament of extreme unction to the deceased, conducted the service and delivered a felicitious and impressive address, after which the mournful procession moved to a picturesque spot on the grounds close to the residence, which was chosen for the last resting place of the deceased. Many wreaths of flowers were cast by loving hands upon the casket as it was reverently lowered in the grave.

"Lay her in the earth,
And from her fair and beauteous flesh let violets spring."

Catarrh Can't be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you have to take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucus surface. Hall's Catarrh Cure is no quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular perscription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucus surface. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarrh. Send for testimonials, free.

the choice of two poor devils of selecting the one with a lifetime before him.

As the census enumerator was leaving the house Madge ran up stairs and put a letter into his hands. He read it hastily and then placed his arm around her waist. The green spectacles were gone. The census man was George Darrell.

"It is all right, dear," he cried triumphantly. "Smalley & Smart want me back. The real defaulter is found out, and I am to get an increase of salary. And now there are only thirty questions in the census, but I am going to put another. It is one of vital importance—will you marry me?"

She pulled his head and kissed him, and then she ran into the parlor to enjoy a good cry.—Curtis Kinglake in New York Commercial Advertiser.

The Bowery in New York.

The Bowery is a mile of history. No other street tells so much of the story of the Republic and its metropolis.

A trail of the warlike Wickquaskeeks when yet the primeval forest overshadowed the island of Manhattan and an Indian village occupied the future site of Chatham square; a bridle path to the homestead of the last and greatest of the Dutch governors, stout Petrus Stuyvesant, whose Bowery gave its name to the roadway which his English successors widened and improved; a country postroad through which rattled the stages to Boston and Albany, and down which the Quaker merchant Murray lumbered in his "leathern conveniency" from the heights of Inkienberg, now Murray Hill, and the wife of Frederick Phillipse, the Yonkers Patroon, drove her four black ponies at breakneck speed.

A broad avenue that echoed proudly to the tread of the American battalions that marched in with Washington on that November day which saw the last British soldiers embarking at the Battery; a street bordered with stately poplars and lined with pretty rural homes in the early years of this century; a street in its transition state famous for its firemen and its fights, for its theatres and its belles, for its patriotism and its pugilism, for its American types of character and its development of foreign methods, the Bowery is now a great historic thoroughfare, which all nations of the earth have combined to make the most cosmopolitan of all the streets in the New World.

From first to last it has had the strange distinction of never having seen a church erected upon its building line, and yet it has always been typical of city life, and the story of New York would be shorn of much of its glory if no mention were made of the mile of street which stretches between Chatham Square and the Cooper Union.—Felix Oldboy in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

The Catacombs of Paris.

The vast catacombs by which a large portion of the city of Paris is undermined were only known by tradition until the year 1774, when some alarming accidents aroused the attention of the government. The old quarries were then surveyed and plans of them taken, the result being the discovery that the churches, palaces and almost the entire southern portion of Paris was undermined and in great danger of sinking into the abyss below. A special committee was appointed to investigate the matter, but were very tardy in carrying out instructions, doing but little until the summer of 1775, and not then until several houses had sank 90 to 100 feet below the surrounding level.

Investigation proved that the quarrymen who had honeycombed the foundation of the city had done so regardless of the consequences, leaving pillars without any regularity whatever, and some too weak to stand the enormous strain of the weight above, some of the pillars themselves having been undermined or set upon foundations that had been previously hollowed out. The aqueduct of Arcueil passed over this treacherous ground. It had already suffered some shocks, and if the quarries had continued to be neglected accidents would have happened that would have cut off its supply from the fountains of Paris and flooded the excavations with water.

For years and years workmen were busily engaged building pillars and supports under the city, until about the year of the revolution, when everything was brought to a standstill, and the catacombs converted into an immense underground deadhouse. How many innocent persons were murdered during the awful days of the "reign of terror," and thrown down the shafts and wells that led to this awful charnel house, will never be known. At least 3,000,000 human remains are said to repose in the catacombs.—St. Louis Republic.

A Pretty Old Eagle.

A German paper states that in Lapland an eagle was shot, and around its neck it had a brass chain, to which a tin box which contained a little tin box was fastened. The box contained a slip of paper, on which was written in Danish, "Caught and set free again in 1792."

A remarkable longevity for an eagle is possible, but it is quite certain that the tin box around this particular bird's neck would have rusted and gone to pieces in ten years.—London Tid-Bits.

Lawyers and Lawyers.

A citizen of New York who lost his boy by the caving in of an embankment says that nine different lawyers called upon him before the burial to engage the case—bring suit for damages. He had no shotgun, so all escaped.—Detroit Free Press.

WOMEN AND MICE.

The reason why a woman is afraid of a mouse is a profound mystery—indeed, it has never been very clearly proven that she is. But some women are constantly in such a nervous, irritable condition that the slightest thing annoys and startles them. The cause of this unfortunate state of affairs is usually some functional derangement; some distressing or painful irregularity, some derangement or peculiar weakness incident to her sex; or, it may be due to inflammation, ulceration or displacement of some of the pelvic viscera, or to other organic lesions peculiar to her sex. From whichever cause it may arise, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive remedy, so certain in its curative results that its manufacturers sell it, through druggists, under a guarantee of its giving satisfaction in every case, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded. As a soothing and strengthening nervine, "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, exhaustion, prostration, hysteria, spasms and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the womb. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

A Brawny Bargee at the Helm.

To-day it is raining in torrents. He knows by experience the value of a "Fish Brand Slicker." It is his sole article of dress, and to him worth drawers, shirt, coat, vest, and pants. He'll tell you tales by the hour of storms lasting days and nights when that "Slicker" made up the whole difference between comfort and misery; and all for a mere trifle from his week's pay. Why don't you buy one for yourself? To realize how little it costs, think how long it lasts. It will outwear four suits of clothes. Better get one to-day, before you forget it. A day's delay may cause a month of sickness, and cost a hundred times the price of a Slicker. Beware of worthless imitations; every garment stamped with the "Fish Brand" Trade Mark. Don't accept any inferior coat when you can have the "Fish Brand Slicker" delivered without extra cost. Particulars and illustrated catalogue free.
